

Langly Beta — Your Invitation

A note for Juliana, from Ryan

Hey Juliana,

After our meeting I built an App I think complements your method, and I'd really value your review and input.

It's called Langly — a language learning app. The current version is already in the App Store and focuses on English → Portuguese learners. The newest version I'm working on now, v1.2 (not yet released), adds the Portuguese → English direction plus all the upgraded features below, and it's currently in the beta testing phase. So your review means a real difference before it is released.

I just sent you the TestFlight invite by email — check the inbox for jlongosilva@gmail.com (Apple sends it, subject line is from TestFlight). It lets you install the beta on your iPhone.

It's designed as supplemental practice between your lessons, not a replacement for teaching — but it is very customizable for everyone.

What's in it

Vocabulary Builder (the core)

- On-device translation — words and phrases translated instantly, no internet needed.
- Users build their own custom blocks — up to 10 blocks of 15 words each (150 words total) — so students create lists from their own lessons and daily life. It comes preloaded with over 150 words in Block Categories.
- Gamified — each block feeds the Match Madness style word game (like Duolingo but without the time limits — match pairs before time runs out) with streaks and reminders to work on your progress.
- The same custom blocks run in Audio Mode for drilling your speaking (see below) — build once, practice two ways.

Offline + private

- Everything runs on-device — works fully without internet.

Audio Mode

- Hands-free repetition audio loop: English → Portuguese → repeat
- You set the number of repetitions and the gap between each word / phrase
- Native pronunciation via text-to-speech, in every language
- Perfect for drilling between classes — in the car, on a walk, doing dishes — the words sink in by repetition (practice makes permanent).

Where I especially need your input

- The entire Portuguese side of the app — titles, instructions, headings — was translated using AI, so I really want a native teacher's eyes on it to make sure it sounds natural and correct, not robotic.
- When users add their own custom words, translation uses Google Translate when online and an internal dictionary when offline — so if you or your students spot any awkward or incorrect translations in real use, that's exactly the feedback I need.

Here's what I'd propose

What I offer

- You test it with your students — in both language directions
- If you think it genuinely helps them, I'll set up a way for all of your students to get free access — they'd normally pay for the app, but your students won't.

In exchange

- Free 1-on-1 Portuguese lessons from you for a period of time (whatever feels fair)
- If you believe in it, a mention in your social media posts — and if friends / family of your students discover it through you and pay for the app, that's where I make money

So: your students get a free practice tool, you get a student, I get lessons + growth. Everyone wins.

No pressure — since I know you via Valeria I thought of you for the first testing option I put out anywhere.

Contact me anytime via WhatsApp with any questions or input.

Kindest regards,

Ryan Wuckert
